Dear Fellow Shareholders,

January 2022 was marked by a global sell off in equities, caused by rising inflation, concerns over central banks tightening monetary policy and geopolitical tensions in Eastern Europe. The MSCI World Index (AUD) closed down 2.3% for the month, the Euro Stoxx 50 Index down 2.9%, US S&P 500 Index fell 5.3%, Japan's TOPIX Index down 4.8%, and China's CSI 300 Index closed down 7.6%, while the UK FTSE 100 Index was up 1.1% in local terms.

Commodity prices surged during the month, with crude oil prices rising more than 15%. Increasing demand post-pandemic, combined with growing fears of a Russian invasion of Ukraine saw the global benchmark oil price reach USD90 a barrel for the first time in more than seven years. Investor sentiment deteriorated in the United States after the release of the US Federal Reserve's 'hawkish' meeting minutes, signalling the imminent removal of monetary stimulus, while fears of an earlier-than-anticipated lift in US interest rates propelled US government bond yields higher.

Australian equities fell for the month, driven lower by the information technology and health care sectors. The S&P/ASX 200 Accumulation Index fell 6.4%, its worst January performance since 2008, and the S&P/ASX All Ordinaries Accumulation Index declined 6.6% for the month.

WAM Alternative Assets Megatrends Series

Portfolio Manager Dania Zinurova recently launched the WAM Alternative Assets Megatrends Series, exploring the long-term megatrends that can be accessed through investing in alternative asset classes. Megatrends are defined as macroeconomic changes that are being observed on a global scale, which are transforming economies, businesses and societies. The series focuses on four key megatrends including: digitalisation, demographical shifts and ageing populations, climate change and the increasing demand for food. Dania has also covered the fundamentals of alternative asset classes and the unique opportunities available in her previous video series: WAM Alternative Assets Education Series

In the media

I recently presented at the Morningstar Investment Conference for Individual Investors, discussing WAM Strategic Value (ASX: WAR), buybacks, and how discounts are driving the listed investment company (LIC) market transformation. You can register here to receive a recording of the conference (available to registrants until 4 March 2022) for more insights into the LIC structure and investing landscape in 2022.

I also discussed with The Australian my market outlook for 2022, and the impact of rising inflation and increasing interest rates on equity markets. As economies and societies begin to live with coronavirus, companies with low price-to-earnings ratios and those not negatively impacted by increasing interest rates will become attractive investment opportunities.

The world's most compelling undervalued growth companies.

The WAM Global (ASX: WGB) investment portfolio decreased during the month. Concentrix (NASDAQ: CNXC), a leading provider of technology infused customer experience solutions, was a contributor to the investment portfolio performance while consumer credit reporting agency TransUnion (NYSE: TRU) was a detractor.

Concentrix specialises in providing customer engagement and business performance solutions for some of the world's best brands including over 100 Global Fortune 500 clients. In January 2022, Concentrix announced its full year 2021 earnings results, which beat market expectations. The company delivered adjusted constant currency revenue growth of over 17%, together with margin expansion. Guidance provided for FY22 implies another year of 8-11% organic growth and an increase in margins of 80 basis points. Later in the month, the company held its investor day which highlighted the significant runway for growth as it continues to take share in its core customer experience (CX) solutions market and expand further into adjacent CX and digital IT services, increasing its total addressable market to over USD550 billion. The company laid out the strategy to drive organic revenues up 9% per annum out to 2025 and operating margins to 14.5%. Operational leverage will be driven by growth in more complex high value services, operational efficiencies and internal technology automation. Concentrix expects to have additional opportunities to do selective mergers and acquisitions to further consolidate their markets going forward. Despite its strong performance, the company continues to trade at a significant discount to its peers. We expect it to re-rate as the company builds a track record operating as a public company, and management execute towards their 2025 targets.

TransUnion is a leading global consumer credit bureau. The company provides solutions embedded into customer workflows that enable valuable decision-making capabilities in areas of consumer credit, insurance, fraud and identification. The company was a detractor to performance during the month due to market concerns over slowing mortgage refinance activity. We believe that with rising rates and strong year-ago comparables, mortgage refinance activity will remain challenged in the near-term. However, mortgage refinance activity represents less than 10% of TransUnion's revenue. As evidenced by competitor Experian's (LON: EXPN) recent strong results, we expect strength in other areas of consumer credit, insurance, international and emerging verticals to drive results over the coming quarters. Our long-term view is that the company's strong track record of delivering above industry growth will continue, driven by product innovation and well-timed entry into attractive areas adjacent to its core consumer credit verticals.

The WAM Capital (ASX: WAM) investment portfolio decreased during the month. Iron ore miner Champion Iron (ASX: CIA) was a contributor to the investment portfolio performance, while beauty and wellness business BWX (ASX: BWX) was a detractor.

Headquartered in Canada, Champion Iron is a premium iron ore miner exploring the Bloom Lake and Fire Lake projects in the Canadian province of Quebec. In January, Champion Iron announced its third quarter update, confirming that its growth project, 'Phase II', remained on track for an April completion. The company also announced an inaugural dividend of CAD10 cents per share alongside continued investment growth. Champion Iron has increased its leverage to higher iron ore prices as it progresses its growth projects, which are expected to double product output this year. We remain positive on Champion Iron and expect considerable free cash flow to be generated by the completion of the 'Phase II' project.

BWX is an Australian-based company that is engaged in developing, manufacturing and marketing beauty and personal care products. The company's expansion into the US and UK is gaining traction, which, coupled with new products and a larger distribution network, is driving growth in their share of the market. In January, the resignation of Chief Executive Officer David Fenlon was announced, with Mr Fenlon moving into a Non-Executive Direction position on the Board. Despite Mr Fenlon's resignation, the appointment of his successor, BWX's Chief Operating Officer Rory Gratton, demonstrates continuity in the company's management team.

Actively investing in the highest quality Australian companies.

The WAM Leaders investment portfolio decreased during the month, outperforming the S&P/ASX 200 Accumulation Index. Significant contributors to the investment portfolio outperformance included iron ore miner BHP Group (ASX: BHP) and oil and gas producer Santos (ASX: STO).

During the month, we saw strengthening evidence that the slowdown in China had passed a trough. The People's Bank of China began to signal monetary policy easing by cutting the one-year policy loan rate and injecting 200 billion yuan into the financial system in order to reduce borrowing costs and encourage credit growth. This buoyed iron ore prices, which lead to BHP Group's outperformance. On 28 January 2022, BHP Group consolidated its London-listed company into its Australian-listed business, making it the largest corporation listed on the ASX with a market capitalisation of $237 billion, which equates to more than 11% of the total S&P/ASX 200 Index. We continue to favour BHP Group particularly for its exposure to iron ore and copper.

In January 2022, oil prices surged to their highest levels since 2014, benefitting energy company Santos. This rally was underpinned by a number of factors including strengthening demand following a decline in severity of coronavirus cases globally and mobility returning to pre-coronavirus levels. Stockpiles of oil remain low, with China in particular at bare minimum inventory levels with the possibility of price-agnostic restocking following Chinese New Year. Oil production has been interrupted due to a number of Organisation of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC+) members operating with spare capacity, limiting OPEC+'s ability to ramp production meaningfully. Finally, rising geopolitical tensions between Russia – a country that supplies over 10% of oil globally – and Ukraine have added further complexity to the issue at hand, with the threat of crippling sanctions against Russia. We expect oil prices to remain elevated as these factors continue to play out. Our preferred exposure to this thematic is through Santos due to its highly regarded management team and the expected realisation of synergies following their acquisition of Oil Search. We believe Santos' planned project equity sell downs over 2022 will provide the company with optionality to lift the dividend or accelerate their investment in the energy transition.

The most exciting undervalued growth opportunities in the Australian micro-cap market.

The WAM Microcap (ASX: WMI) investment portfolio decreased during the month, outperforming the S&P/ASX Small Ordinaries Accumulation Index. Significant contributors to the investment portfolio outperformance included Austin Engineering (ASX: ANG) and Generation Development Group (ASX: GDG).

Austin Engineering manufactures and supplies specialised mining products that improve efficiency and assist decarbonisation efforts for clients globally. Currently, Austin Engineering is undergoing a three-phase optimisation plan under the guidance of its newly appointed Chief Executive Officer and Managing Director David Singleton. In December 2021, Austin Engineering reported a five-year contract renewal with Rio Tinto (ASX: RIO). In January, the company announced updated guidance on first half FY2022 earnings before interest, tax, depreciation and amortisation (EBITDA) to $11.5 million and indicated an increase in EBITDA margins across the group, signalling that the company's turnaround strategy is delivering. We are positive that the company will see revenue and EBITDA increase across the Asia-Pacific, North America and South America sites upon the execution of its three-phase plan.

Generation Development Group, owner of Generation Life, specialises in investment bond products which provide tax-effective investment solutions. In January, Generation Development Group released its December quarter update recording its highest-ever sales inflow for the quarter and a 44% increase in funds under management, compared to the previous corresponding period. Generation Life achieved a 52% market share of annual sales inflows in the September 2021 quarter, growing from 40% in the prior corresponding period. We remain positive on Generation Development Group ahead of its upcoming launch of the investment-linked lifetime annuity, subject to regulatory approval, and the next instalment of investment bonds that we believe will further bolster the company's customer value proposition.

W | A | M Alternative Assets

Unique opportunities beyond traditional assets

The WAM Alternative Assets (ASX: WMA) investment portfolio increased during the month driven by increases across the real assets and private equity portfolio assets. In February, WAM Alternative Assets made a new capital commitment of $10 million to invest in Centennial Property Group's (CPG) industrial and logistics strategy, the CEN (I&L) Partnership Fund, alongside their cornerstone investor and affiliate Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co L.P. (KKR). The strategy aims to target Australian assets valued at $15 million and over, in the industrial and logistics property sector, with a focus on acquiring vacant or underutilised land that provide opportunities to develop core, multi-unit industrial and logistics estates located in established, land constrained markets. We see this as an attractive investment opportunity for shareholders, which is supported by a key megatrend; digitalisation and technological advancement. We believe the underlying driver for this sector is the development and growth of e-commerce and online retail.

The Australian industrial and logistics sector continues to benefit from fundamental but sustained tailwinds. During 2020, in the early stages of the coronavirus, and throughout 2021 the sector continued to generate double digit returns in Australia. The growth and urbanisation of Australia's population are major contributors to economic growth for the sector and continue to place significant pressure on transport infrastructure and land availability in major cities. This convergence of trends will see continued demand for land-constrained infill logistics space (real estate development sites that exist within a mostly built out market), as businesses seek to support supply chain requirements. CPG's industrial and logistics business is well established and specialises in the sectors' mid-space. CPG has a longstanding presence across the national industrial and logistics markets with a team that has completed over 300 transactions. Its boutique structure and entrepreneurial approach to investing allows the company to be more flexible in what assets it pursues, and how they implement the strategy, resulting in a better alignment with investment returns. CPG's industrial and logistics investment team are experts in the real estate market and are led by Executive Director and Industrial CEO, Paul Ford who has extensive experience and a strong reputation in the market as a seasoned investor in the industrial and logistics space in Australia.

W | A | M Strategic Value

Discounted asset opportunities.

The WAM Strategic Value investment portfolio decreased in January during a challenging period for equity markets. Global and domestic equities fell sharply marked by rising inflation, the tightening of monetary policy by central banks and geopolitical tensions in Eastern Europe. Detractors to the investment portfolio included Pengana International Equities (ASX: PIA), VGI Partners Global Investments (ASX: VG1) and NAOS Small Cap Opportunities Company (ASX: NSC). The decline in equity markets led to the widening of discounts to net tangible assets (NTA) across the listed investment company (LIC) and listed investment trust (LIT) sector, allowing WAM Strategic Value to take advantage of further discounted asset opportunities.

Pleasingly, L1 Long Short Fund (ASX: LSF) provided strong absolute returns to the WAM Strategic Value investment portfolio and was a contributor to the investment portfolio performance for the month. L1 Long Short Fund provides investors access to an absolute return fund, offering a highly diversified portfolio of long and short positions based on a fundamental, bottom-up research process. The company's investment objective is to deliver strong, positive and risk-adjusted returns over the long term while seeking to preserve shareholder capital. In January 2022, L1 Long Short Fund returned 3% for the month, outperforming the S&P/ASX 200 Accumulation Index by 9%. L1 Long Short Fund also announced investment portfolio performance of 30% and total shareholder return of 43% for the 2021 calendar year. L1 Long Short Fund outlined that the investment portfolio outperformance was achieved through broad-based stock gains and tailwinds from strong commodity prices. As at 31 January 2022, the company's share price was trading at a 10.8% discount to its pre-tax NTA. We continue to hold L1 Long Short Fund and expect this discount will narrow moving forward as its focus on cash flow-based valuations and traditional finance fundamentals provide a tailwind to the investment portfolio performance.

*WAM Strategic Value received WAM Global shares and options as scrip consideration for TGG shares held.

The WAM Research (ASX: WAX) investment portfolio decreased during the month. Debt buyer and collector Credit Corp Group (ASX: CCP) was a contributor to the investment portfolio performance, while beauty and wellness business, BWX (ASX: BWX) was a detractor.

Credit Corp Group provides debt purchase and collection and consumer lending services in Australia, New Zealand and the United States. The share price outperformed during the month, in the lead up to their FY2022 interim results released at the start of February. Expectations were building of a positive result and the company delivered, reporting an 8% increase in underlying net profit after tax (NPAT) in the six months to 31 December 2021, underpinned by strong collections activity. The period included record investment driven by the US purchase debt ledger (PDL) acquisitions alongside the acquisition of Radio Rentals in Australia. Consumer lending demand accelerated to record levels over the December quarter, as key markets emerged from coronavirus-related lockdowns, while pilot projects continued to demonstrate promising results for the company. Management's confidence was reflected in an upgrade to full year 2022 guidance, with PDL investment increasing to $300 million to $320 million and NPAT to a range of $92 million to $97 million. We continue to see upside to guidance and remain positive on the medium-term outlook as unsecured credit balances are set to accelerate as consumer stimulus fades and the impacts of coronavirus ease. This is expected to underpin organic growth, while a strong balance sheet positions the company to capitalise on further earnings accretive acquisitions with a range of opportunities currently in the market.

BWX is an Australian-based company that is engaged in developing, manufacturing and marketing beauty and personal care products. The company's expansion into the US and UK is gaining traction, which, coupled with new products and a larger distribution network, is driving growth in their share of the market. In January, the resignation of Chief Executive Officer David Fenlon was announced, with Mr Fenlon moving into a Non-Executive Director position on the Board. Despite Mr Fenlon's resignation, the appointment of his successor, BWX's Chief Operating Officer Rory Gratton, demonstrates continuity in the company's management team.

Market mispricing opportunities in the Australian market.

The WAM Active investment portfolio decreased during the month. Iron ore miner, Champion Iron (ASX: CIA) was a contributor to the investment portfolio performance, while location-based services provider Life360 (ASX: 360) was a detractor.

Headquartered in Canada, Champion Iron is a premium iron ore miner exploring the Bloom Lake and Fire Lake projects in the Canadian province of Quebec. In January, Champion Iron announced its third quarter update, confirming that its growth project, 'Phase II', remained on track for an April completion. The company also announced an inaugural dividend of CAD10 cents per share alongside continued investment growth. Champion Iron has increased its leverage to higher iron ore prices as it progresses its growth projects, which are expected to double product output this year. We remain positive on Champion Iron and expect considerable free cash flow to be generated by the completion of the 'Phase II' project.

Life360 is a family safety platform that allows parents to track the whereabouts of their children, with over 33 million users globally. The initial catalyst identified for our investment was the appointment of Randi Zuckerberg, sister of Meta (formerly Facebook) founder, Chief Executive Officer and Chairman Mark Zuckerberg. In January 2022, Life360 provided a December 2021 quarter update, reporting a third consecutive quarter of record subscribers, driving a 62% increase in revenue growth, ahead of prior company guidance. Life360 also completed the acquisition of Bluetooth tracking device company Tile in January 2022, with holiday period trading results tracking to plan. Expectations of rising bond yields and the resulting rotation out of higher value growth equities has impacted the share price in recent months and we have managed our position size accordingly. Life360 and its underlying business model are strengthening, with the acquisition of Tile seeing the company emerge as a global leader in location tracking services and the outlook remaining positive. We believe that a potential dual-listing in the US remains a key catalyst for the company.
